Keep Off The Grass

There have been several letters to The Kernel on the matter of the barbed wire fences that have been strong over different parts of the э анцрия.

There is one fence by McVey hall, one by Pence, one running from Eaflerty to Rose street. and one on the south side of the main walk toward Limestone.

reported that the fences were pitt up to protect the grass from invasion by the students.

This protest is the personal opinion of the Editor of The Kernel and does not necessarily reflect the opinion of other members of the

I am not going to score the University for using the iron posts and the wire when they are so badly needed for other purposes more brueheial to the students

As everyone on the campus probably knows by now, I am from the country where we know barbed wire so well that the pronunciation has become "bob-wire," Well, the only use it is put to there is no keep stock out of the corn field and 'tater patch. It certainly is not used for decorative purposes in the from yard-or even the back yard. For that we use palings or mesh

Now, I don't think that anyone will call the students at the University hogs, cattle, or all of us donkies, but the barbed wire has the same ellect. It also gives the impression of a prison, and the wires might just as well be electrified.

Perhaps the students-some of them-do walk on the grass, but let me say this, there has been less of it this year than any year that I have been to the University. The "Please" signs are helping in this matter, and would be of more help if they were put at each end of the usual path. so that they would eatch the students going each

We, the students of the University, have been preached at and preached at to protect the beauty of our campus so that all visitors will give exclamations of delight and will send their children to the University. Frankly, I would rather attend a University that had a path or two across the lawns, than one that had barbed wire fences planted at strategic intervals on the

Any visitor who was walking across the campus at night might decide to cm across the lawn, nor knowing that the fences were there. Consequently, he would come across a barbed wire entanglement that would make him think he was in No Man's fand, and after he had extracted his torn conhing and ffesh from the wire, his tingling sensation would be that this was the most pecaliar campus he ever came across.

And the posts are not a tasty black or green that would harmonize with the color scheme of the campus, but that shade of yellow that is so particularly vite. All in all, it looks like well, it does.

We of The Kernel stall want to thank the maintenance and operations department for its splendid cooperation in collecting the scrap metal in aud around Lexington. This drive would certainly have been a flop without the mainrenance trucks.

In fact, there has been cooperation on nearly all froms, except for one or two places that The maintenance and operations department—turned in their scrap downtown instead of for The Kernel drive. We hope that it was merely a misunderstanding and not a deliberate incooperative spirit on the part of persons in futended to mention the pretty new barb wire fence across the grass northeast of McVey hall, but such a ruckus has been raised by others that I can only say it looked just a wee bit better without aforementioned decoration.

This morning about four o'clock in the rold grey dawn we awoke just at the end of one of the weirdest nightmares anyone ever thought of; and in case this episode is somewhat disconnected, just blame is on an nustrung nervons system. There oughta be a law against nightmares, because trying to get our from nuder a running horse at 4 a.m. is not exactly conducive to the best academic or journalistic effort.

Friday saw the opening blast of the student political organizations when freshmen represcutatives to Student Covernment legislature were elected. It has been said that the University is the breeding place for Kentucky polities, and that gave the new students a sample. Now we know how the Bluegrass state rares always manage to appear in the national eye, regardless or how important or unimportant they may be. It really is a science here, and delunitely good prartice, though it takes much of the honor from certain positions supposedly hon-of cherubic freshman and sophomore boys during the last few days. Most of them are trying to imagine themselves in khaki, and quite a number do not think it would go well with their eves, or hair, or something. Tough luck, somy, we have something to look forward to which will be a great experience if it isn t too big for us, and don't think it will be. If Congress rolls this bill through on schedule, the picture will change greatly at this as well as any other university very shortly. Plenty of fellows, in addition to the first person singular, will find January a cold month to start service, but it is good to see that the legislators are not too wishy washy to score from midfield drop a quarter in the Comget the thing started before election time rolls

SKIPPING AROUND AT RANDOM: Professor Rees of the math department advocates that The Kernel be released at some time other than just before classes. Reason for this is that students spend more class time reading it than in hearing proceedings supervised by the teacher. If some teachers cracked like that we would intimate that they might make their classes more interesting, but we would not say it of Rees. . . . Gravy-covered cuffnotes: The Old Dominion, I am now fully convinced, is a wonderful place to visit, but football trips should spot as the toop enters the stretch

The Kentucky Wildcats returned early Sunday morning from Aipha and Aipha Tau Omega with Roanoke, Va., where the Cadets from Virginia Tech scored a two wins each. The Techmen were a very inspired 21-21 tie with the Kentuckians in Roanoke's new $300,000 stadium

> The Wildcats entered the contest favorites by three touch- off the PKT chattenge too easily. downs, and left it glad to get a knotted score out of the deal.

From my point of view, you couldn't place the blame on any person, player, or coach. Kentucky started off well by taking a scoreless. The Phi Kaps have 14-0 lead, but several disheartening breaks for the 'Cats put the counted 42 points, and have allowed Technien back in the game.

Probably the break that aided the l'irginia eleven more than Rho, 30-0; Gamma Tau Aipha, 32-0; junior back, was trapped in his end any other was when they blocked a punt of Phil Cutchin's on and Sigma Chi, 12-0. Phi Kap wins his own 20-yard mark.

Cutchin, earlier in the game, had set the opposing team back 18-6. deep in their own territory with a quick kick that must have traveled some 60 yards. It was a great bit of strategy.

The triple-threat 'Cat back attempted again, and lailed. The strategy didn't fail. The V. P. I. line, very much underrated by Kentucky gained 45 yards by for- everyone, plunged through the Kentuckians, smothering Cutchin's

This incident gave the Gobblers heart and conrage. It worked exactly opposite for the 'Cats.

The Kentuckians were due for a bad one. They have played good ball this season-in fact, it's been plenty good.

The game didn't hurt Kentucky's standing in the Southeastern conference, and after all, that's primarily what we are interested

So charge it up to a team's one bad game a year, and forget about the tie. The season is not quite over, and Kentucky will still have plenty to say before the curtain is drawn on the grid-

The trip was, by far, the wackiest I have ever made with the 'Cats. We left Lexington at 8 o'clock Thursday morning in an 1890 day coach. We arrived at Ashland at 1:30. From there we were supposed to catch a train to Kenova, W. Va., where we were to change to the crack train of the N. and W. R. R. which was to take us on into Roanoke.

Well somehow a mix-up came about, and the team finally had to walk across the Ohio River to Coal Grove where they caught a train.

After arriving at Roanoke, things became even more confusing. Friday the team planned to practice in the new stadium. Taxis were ordered, but after a long wait, they failed to show up. So the team walked, thumbed, and did everything but hop a motorcycle to the ball park.

On the return trip, more than half of the squad climbed aboard a coal truck to ride back to the hotel in unusual fashion.

Saturday the transportation became even worse. Before the game some cabs were ordered, but again they failed to shop up, so the 'Cats resorted to new and novel ways for a football team to travel. They did some more hitch-hiking, some more walking, and some even road street-cars to the stadium.

Time Ont, a feature of the editorial page of The Kernel, written by some juvenile hailing to the call of Tommy Moore, is again the department of utter confusion and mis-statement.

Tommy, my boy, let me tell you a few things. Speaking as an old football hand around this University, you should keep your month shut, and you'd be well off.

For the last three years, I have been traveling with the 'Cats. For the last three years, I have covered the 'Cats daily in practice.' I have met newspapermen wide and far. But, my boy, Alex Bower, sports editor of the Lexington Leader, is by far the most competent sports writer that I have ever had the pleasure to be associated with. Coach Ab Kirwan recently made the statement that "Alex Bower is one of the finest men in the newspaper business." Alex Bower, never in his two years with the 'Cats, has ever soid or written anything that he didn't firmly believe. He's the only newspaperman that has covered the Wildcats every day they practice. You said that maybe they all aren't so good (meaning some sophomore backs) but there are reasons for this which you don't exactly know about. Dear Tommy, Alex Bower knows as much about the Wildcats as any man could. He's traveled with them all over the sonth. He watched them win, lose, and draw. He knows each boy personally, and each boy knows him personally.

Tommy, it's not Alex Bower who should shut up before he ays too much, it's TOMMY MOORE.

She's Writing Her Brother

Mary's just a little tyke-scarcely past her third birthday. Writing isn't easy for her. She probably scribbles or draws all over the page trying to say something in her first letter to her

Bobby-he's her brother-started to the University this fall. He's eighteen and had planned to study engineering a year or so before going into the army.

Mary knows that. She's heard him talk about college all summer and she went to the train with Mommy and Daddy when he left in September. But that was weeks ago. Among her dolls and childish dreams she had almost forgotten about Bobby-until this morning.

This morning she heard Mommy and Daddy talking about Bobby and the war, and something about "nineteen-year-olds." Mary finally understood what was the matter. She knew Bobby might leave for the army very soon. That was why Mommy's eyes were so red, and why Daddy scarcely had a kind word for anyone.

It's true Mary is only a child, but some times there is an advantage in being young and not having so many problems forcing themselves upon you. She knows what college means to Bobby and that's why she's writing this letter.

Underneath her crude scrawl is a message from a simple, pure heart. A note from a little girl who has yet to learn that there are men who can bomb civilian homes and churches as quickly as they machine gun the survivors of a sinking vesse. She isn't confused by all the color and horror o war, and her faltering pencil isn't attempting to say anything about this part of Bobby's life.

She is trying to tell him to stay in college until he is called to the service. If college meant so much to him last suummer, not to toss it in the shadow of the screaming headlines of the daily war news. The army needs trained men now, and America will need them after the war. College is the best place to get this training, so don't muff this opportunity to obtain even a part of it.

Mary probably filled the page with this short message. She's young and youngsters think big and write big. But I'm sure that is what she wanted to say, just as I'm sure she'll expect you and me to follow her advice. Because, you see to me, she's America. She's the sort of person that I want to fight for, and risk my neck for.

She's my sister.
